Note 1 – TRA Distributions

As of September 21, 2009, a total of approximately $572 million, or about $2.34 per former Seagate share, has been distributed to TRA Rights holders. With the final distribution on September 21, 2009, and upon filing of the Trust's final fiduciary income tax returns, the Trust will have terminated. There will be no further distribution by the TRA Trust Fund.

Note 2 – Litigation Settlement Fund

A one-time cash payment has been distributed representing proceeds of the settlement reached in October 2000 between Seagate, VERITAS, Silver Lake Partners and certain stockholders who filed suit last year with respect to the acquisition of Seagate. The settlement, which provides that $50 million will be distributed to Seagate stockholders, has been consummated and all required stipulations and court approvals have now been obtained. See page 143 of the Joint Proxy Statement/Prospectus.

Note 3 – Final Accounting Payment

An additional one-time cash payment of approximately $0.13270419 per share of "old" Seagate stock has been made as a result of adjustments made following a final accounting of Seagate following the transaction closing. This distribution was made on September 18, 2001.

Note 4 – Federal Income Tax Treatment

A portion of each payment will be treated as interest in accordance with the discussion regarding Section 483 of the Internal Revenue Code, as described on pages 171 and 172 of the Joint Proxy Statement/Prospectus. The percentage of each payment that is treated as interest is indicated above. This portion is taxable to a cash basis taxpayer as ordinary income in the year received. The balance of each payment will be treated as sales proceeds.

Sales proceeds are taxable in the year of receipt by a cash basis taxpayer. Such proceeds will be generally be considered capital gain and will be short-term or long-term depending upon your holding period, as of November 22, 2000, of the Seagate stock given up in the transaction. If any amount of income was recognized by you in connection with the tax refund rights in your 2000 tax return, you may offset that amount against your sales proceeds as a return of basis. All proceeds in excess of this basis will be subject to tax as capital gains.

The following is a summary of some of the U.S. federal income tax reporting for the transactions described above. The reporting and tax treatment may be different for state tax purposes and for non-U.S. tax purposes. As always, please consult a tax professional about the possible tax consequences of these payments.

Forms 1099 have been issued to former Seagate shareholders to report the actual cash distributions made to them in 2001 and 2002. A Form 1099-INT reports the portion of the distributions that are treated as interest for tax purposes (if it is over $10.00), and Form 1099-B reports the balance of the distribution.

- For distributions from the TRA Trust, the Forms 1099 were sent out by Wells Fargo along with a summary letter.
- For distributions from Mellon Investor Services (the Final Accounting Payment), the Forms 1099 have been mailed for all cash distributions made by Mellon in 2001.
- Because the distributions came from two different sources, former Seagate shareholders may receive a total of four Forms 1099.

For the distribution of the Litigation Settlement Fund by Gilardi & Co., we are not aware that the settlement fund filed Forms 1099 in 2001. However the interest portion (4.23% of the payment) should be reported as interest income on your 2001 income tax return, and the balance should be reported in the same manner as amounts reported on Form 1099-B, described below.

Amounts reported on Form 1099-INT and imputed interest portion of payments: You should report any amounts on Form 1099-INT as interest income on your 2001 income tax return. If you did not receive a Form 1099-INT (because the amount was less than $10.00 or because the amount was paid by the Settlement Fund), you should report the percentage of the distribution indicated in summary of additional cash payments (page 1) as interest income. Individuals should report this amount on Schedule B of Form 1040 under "Interest Income." Other taxpayers should report the interest income in the appropriate section of their returns in accordance with the instructions.

Amounts reported on Forms 1099-B and amounts treated as Gross Proceeds: You should report any amounts on Form 1099-B as Gross Proceeds received from the exchange of your Seagate shares in November 2000. If you did not receive a Form 1099-B (because the amount was paid by the settlement fund), you should report the portion of each distribution that is not treated as Interest Income (as indicated in summary of additional cash payments, above) as Gross Proceeds. The tax treatment of the payment will depend in part on the type of payment and how you reported the transaction on your 2000 income tax return.

In general, if you recognized a capital gain in 2000 for all or a portion of the cash received, you should treat the amounts treated as Gross Proceeds from the Settlement Fund and the Final Accounting Payment as additional gain from the exchange of the Seagate shares. If you did not recognize capital gain for the cash received in 2000 (because you realized a loss on the exchange), then you should consult your tax advisor on the appropriate reporting of the Gross Proceeds in 2001 and subsequent years.

With respect to the amounts received from the TRA Trust, the income tax treatment will depend on whether or not you reported the estimated fair market value of the TRA Rights as part of the amounts realized in 2000. If you included the estimated value of the TRA Rights as part of the amounts realized in 2000 (approximately $0.08 per former Seagate share exchanged), then you should report the amount received as Gross Proceeds, and you may be entitled to claim a portion of your basis in the TRA right (approximately $0.20 per former Seagate share exchanged) against the Gross Proceeds. However as noted on p. 172 of the Joint Proxy, the federal income tax treatment of a partial payment on a tax refund right is not provided under current law. If you did not include the estimated value of the TRA Rights as part of the amount realized in 2000, then the amount reported as Gross Proceeds should be treated as described under "Amounts reported in Forms 1099-B," above.

Example – FOR ILLUSTRATIVE PURPOSES ONLY

You exchanged 1,000 shares of Seagate in 2000 and realized a capital gain. You reported a capital gain equal to the cash received and the value of the TRA Right, which was estimated at $0.08 per former Seagate share, or $80.00 total.

You received the following payments in 2001 for the Litigation Settlement and the Final Accounting Payment:

2001 Distributions	Interest Portion	Gross Proceeds	Total Received
Litigation Settlement	4.23% $8.71	95.77% $197.29	$206.00
Final Accounting Payment	4.60% $6.10	95.40% $126.60	$132.70
Total	$14.81	$323.89	$338.70

On your 2001 income tax return:

- Under Interest Income, you should report $14.81.
- Under Capital Gains and Losses, you should report Gross Proceeds of $323.89 and Basis of $0.00, resulting in a capital gain of $323.89

You also received the following distributions from the TRA Trust:

2001 Distributions (TRA)	Interest Portion	Gross Proceeds	Total Received
August distribution	4.21% $1.81	95.79% $41.10	$42.91
November distribution	5.26% $3.92	94.74% $70.52	$74.44
Total	$5.73	$111.62	$117.35

On your 2001 income tax return:

- Under Interest Income, you should report $5.73.
- Under Capital Gains and Losses, you should report Gross Proceeds of $111.62 and may be entitled to claim a portion of your $80.00 basis against the Gross Proceeds reported.

If you did not include the value of the TRA Rights on your 2000 return, you should report the Interest Income of $5.73 and capital gain of $111.62.
